This is a small stone farmhouse of the type found in great profusion in the northern part of this county. It is distinguished from many of them by its finely cut fieldstone and sophisticated use of large stone corner quoins, and granite lintels over the windows. The house is four bays wide and two deep. All the windows are 6/6 sashes. There is an enclosed chimney at each end of the house. The sides and rear of the house are of rougher stone than the front and it appears that they may have been stuccoed at one time. Bryan H. ANSON This property is well-maintained and appears to be a prosperous farm.
